

TORTURED WITH GRAVEL.

Since Using Doan's Kidney Pills Not a Single Stone Has Formed.

Capt. S. L. Crute, Adj. Wm. Watts Camp, U. C. V., Roanoke, Va., says:

"I suffered a long, long time with my back, and felt draggy and listless and tired all the time. I lost from my usual weight, 225, to 170. Urinary passages were too frequent and I have had to get up often at night. I had headaches and dizzy spells also, but my worst suffering was from renal colic. After I began using Doan's Kidney Pills I passed a gravel stone as big as a bean. Since then I have never had an attack of gravel, and have picked up to my former health and weight. I am a well man, and give Doan's Kidney Pills credit for it."

Prominent on Lecture Platform.

Senator Tillman probably earns more money every year on the lecture platform than any other American who talks to the public for pay. From an authoritative source the statement comes that the South Carolinian's net proceeds thus far this year from his lecture tour are $25,000. Senator Tillman is paid from $250 to $500 a lecture and he is constantly in demand. His season is not confined to the summer Chautauque course and he fills nearly as many dates in the winter as at any other time of the year. In the last four years it is said that he has laid aside over $60,000 from his lecture receipts. Henry Watterson perhaps comes next in the matter of earnings on the platform. Champ Clark, of Missouri, ranks high as a popular favorite and makes about twice as much as a lecturer as his congressional salary.

Rothschilts Never Prosecute.

While the Bank of England makes it a point never under any circumstances to relinquish the prosecution of those who have defrauded it in the slightest degree, being willing, if need be, to spend thousands of pounds to capture and prosecute people who have robbed it of even a few shillings, the Rothschilds make it a rule never to appeal to the courts or to the police in such matters. Of course, they are, like every other banker, occasionally the victims of dishonesty, but neither the police nor the public ever hear about the matter. This has always been a principle of the heads of the house, who take the ground that it is better to bear the loss in silence than to disturb popular confidence in the safety of the concern by allowing it to be seen that its treasures are not adequately safeguarded.

Master of Many Languages.

Gen. Picquart, French minister of war, is a sort of Admiral Crichton, for, besides a wide general cultivation, he reads, writes and speaks Russian, German and English and Italian. Such knowledge of language is not common with Frenchmen, even those of education, but Gen. Picquart's facility is explained, perhaps, by the fact that he is an Alsatian. The Alsatiens have long been noted in France for the readiness with which they acquire languages.

Strangely Mounted.

The strangest military body in the world is a band of cavalry at Saint de Moorway, a province on the east coast of Africa, which is under the rule of the French governor general at Madagascar. These soldiers go about their military operations on oxen. The animals are lean creatures, and it is said they move with surprising rapidity.

Reward for American Sailor.

A few months ago Capt. Matthew Turner, of San Francisco, owner of a schooner, rescued the crews of two Norwegian vessels that had been wrecked in the South Pacific. He has just received a handsome silver coffee set from the Norwegian government in acknowledgment.

CRIED EASILY.

Nervous Woman Stopped Coffee and Quit Other Things.

No better practical proof that coffee is a drug can be required than to note how the nerves become unstrung in women who habitually drink it.

The stomach, too, rebels at being continually drugged with coffee and tea—they both contain the drug—caffeine. Ask your doctor.

An la. woman tells the old story thus:

"I had used coffee for six years and was troubled with headaches, nervousness and dizziness. In the morning upon rising I used to belch up a sour fluid regularly.

"Often I got so nervous and miserable I would cry without the least reason, and I noticed my eyesight was getting poor.

"After using Postum a while, I observed the headaches left me and soon the belching of sour fluid stopped (water brash from dyspepsia). I feel decidedly different now, and I am convinced that it is because I stopped coffee and began to use Postum. I can see better now, my eyes are stronger.

"A friend of mine did not like Postum but when I told her to make it like it said on the package, she liked it all right." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Always boil Postum well and it will surprise you.

THE RUNAWAY ENGINE

By LLEWELLYN LORD

"I never, never will marry you unless papa consents."

She said this so often that I began to fear that she meant it, and her father was one of those hard-headed men who take pride in the fact that they never change their minds.

"Then I'm going away," said I, desperately.

"Where?" she asked. Her incredulous tone maddened me.

"You think it an idle threat, Nell, but unless you decide by this day week to become my wife, either with or without your father's consent, I will go to the farthest place in the world—to New Zealand."

Her eyes filled with tears. She beseeched me to have patience, but I refused.

When the week was up she still was obdurate, and I made all my arrangements to go to New Zealand. Her father was glad to see me go. I believe.

Nell was at the station the day I left. Once more I pleaded with her, but in vain. She loved me, but she could not believe that any happiness would come to our marriage unless she obtained her father's blessing.

It happened that the train was late. We waited at the station with other passengers, including her mother and father. I think the old man had come down to be sure Nell did not weaken and go away with me the last minute. But I began to think that his adorable daughter was as obdurate as her father.

As we waited on the platform for the train that was to bear me away from the girl I loved a switch engine pulled up on one of the farther tracks and my wandering eyes noticed that the engineer and fireman left the locomotive alone while they went into the restaurant for their dinners.

"Oh, Will," murmured Nell, in my ear. "I always have wanted to get in an engine. Do you suppose they would care if we should look at that one while the man is away?"

"Yes, they would be sure to care," I said, gloomily. "Besides, it is against the rules for passengers to be on the tracks."

"Couldn't you get permission for us to look at it?" she asked.

"Come on, we'll not ask for permission," I said. It occurred to me that the engine cab would give me an opportunity for one final and tender good-bye.

We went to the locomotive and inspected its drivers and cylinders, and at last I helped Nell into the cab. She looked at the quivering monster with little exclamations of delight and amazement.

"I'm going to make it whistle," she cried, daringly as she climbed upon the engineer's seat. "If they arrest us and send us to jail, then you can't go away."

She seized hold of the lever and gave it a jerk. Instead of whistling the engine coughed.

"Why, it's moving," she cried.

So it was. I saw the engineer running from the restaurant door and wildly waving his arms.

"Oh, I can't stop it," cried Nell, in dismay. I looked at her and saw that she was pulling and pushing at all the levers within reach. Presently she struck the whistling apparatus, and the engine gave two short, sharp whistles, the starting signal.

We ran off the sidetrack to the main line and the switch engine was picking up speed amazingly. Nell was about to leap out, when I caught her and held her.

"It is too late for that," I said, as I pressed her in my arms. She clung to me in fright. As I looked back toward the station I saw her father was shaking his fist.

"Don't you know how to stop it, Will?" she sobbed.

"No, indeed. But don't be frightened. They will telephone ahead and clear the track for us, and it will stop when the steam dies down."

"Isn't it dreadful!" she exclaimed. "Father and mother will think we are running away. They will believe I did it on purpose."

"Didn't you?" I asked, innocently.

"You know I didn't," she declared, withdrawing from my arms.

"It looks much like you are running away with me," I said. "If you are, I can't help it, can I?"

"You are ridiculous," she laughed.

"Any way, you can't start to New Zealand to-day."

"Unless you go with me," said I.

By this time the engine was going so rapidly and the racket was so great that we could not converse. I made Nell sit on the engineer's seat and to be sure that she did not fall out I held my arm about her waist.

There was a crowd of people lined up at the first station to see us go by and now I had no further fear of a collision. The train dispatcher would be sure to clear the track. I saw by the gauge that the steam was dying out, and after we had passed the third station the engine ran perceptibly slower. It stopped dead still on the outskirts of Cherrydale.

I helped Nell from the engine and we walked to the station house.

The telegraph operator met us at the end of the platform. He had a condescending grin on his face.

"It's all right," he said, as he thrust a yellow envelope in Nell's hands.

I looked over her shoulder and read the message.

"Come back home and be married with our blessing. All is forgiven."

WINTER INJURY OF TREES.

Why It Is That Some Do Not Withstand the Cold Weather.

Most of our fruit trees have a certain power of resisting cold, the lower limits of this power being different with different trees. Generally the trunks and limbs suffer rather than the roots. Peach trees and pear trees suffer most in our northern climate. There are several factors that enter into the winter injury of trees, besides the excessive cold. Drouth in the fall or excessive wetness in the fall may prove very disadvantageous to the trees, if the winter prove to be cold. If insects have defoliated the trees in the summer, thus preventing the elaboration of plant food for ripening up the wood in the fall, the trees will fall an easy prey to severe cold. Trees that have had no cultivation during spring and summer but have been cultivated in the fall and thus stimulated to make a new growth of wood in the fall, are especially likely to be injured by the cold, says Farmers' Review, even if that cold is not severe. Fall rains have the same effect sometimes, when they follow a long season of drouth. The reason is that the new wood formed does not have time to harden before the coming of cold. This accounts for the fact that the branches of trees are more often injured than the roots.

Relative to the appearance of a frozen tree in the early spring, Professor H. J. Eustace of the Geneva, N. Y., station, says: "The external appearance of the injured trees at the end of the winter was normal, but upon cutting into the trunk anywhere above snow line the bark and wood showed marked discoloration, which decreased in intensity from the snow line up. It was found impossible to tell by the appearance of the wood and bark in the spring whether a tree was dead or not, since some trees in which both wood and bark were discolored black and which all believed were dead recovered from the injury and made a good growth during the succeeding two years. The intensity of the discoloration, however, is an index to the degree of injury. Peach trees one to six years old were much less injured and recovered much more rapidly than older trees. Badly discolored pear trees, two to five years old, usually recovered."

THE TINKERING WOMAN.

Get Her a Kit of Tools and Teach Her How to Use Them.

See to it, good farmer friend, that your wife or handy daughter has a kit of tools for her own use.

By a "kit," I mean the very much-needed articles of your workshop that she has to use and borrow from you (perhaps forgetting to replace them). For instance: Hammer, gimlet, hand-saw (always kept in good trim), a box of mixed nails and screws, screw-driver, and, strange as it may sound, a miter-box and a double glue pot.

You will be surprised to find how much of your very valuable time will thus be saved; and you may also be astonished at the amount of good work in carpentering accomplished by the good ladies of your household.

A discarded miter-box and a few feet of molding, left by a busy workman as a donation to the good wife, resulted in a very durable and handsome picture frame that gave great pride to the home manufacturer.

The girl of to-day is beginning to look to cabinet-making and other branches of industry that heretofore were looked upon as the sole domain of her more favored brother. Well, encourage the girls in the use of necessary tools on a farm, writes Kendall Perry, in Farm Journal. Then perhaps we men folks shall have a few less hingeless, knobless doors to look after on a rainy day. Or perhaps we might get the girls to repair a broken fence if the cattle got out when we were away thrashing.

season. The usual stakes and supports are in the way of the cultivator. In an illustration taken from Farm Journal we show an excellent plan for supporting the bushes.

Buy Trees Cautiously.

A machine may show its value in a single year, but it is only by long-continued experience that we can decide as to what varieties of fruit are the best. Therefore it usually pays to stick close to well-known, standard, tried-and-tested varieties.

ODELL OBEYED HIS FATHER.

Emphatic Message That Broke Up Conference of Politicians.

Four years ago, when ex-Gov. Odell, of New York, was coming up for a re-nomination at the convention in Saratoga, there was a plan to put a man on the ticket with him for lieutenant governor to whom Odell objected strongly.

The governor's father, 88 years old, a deacon in the church and very strict in religious matters, was in Saratoga. There was a conference at one of the hotel cottages that lasted until late in the morning. The other leaders were trying to force Odell to take the obnoxious man.

About two o'clock Odell's father, who had heard what was going on, stalked angrily over to the cottage and rapped on the door. Frank Platt, son of Senator Platt, came to the door.

"Well?" said Platt sharply.

"I want to see my son," demanded Odell.

The governor came to the door.

"What is it, father?" he asked.

"Ben," said the old deacon, "tell them to go to—!"

"Yes, father," replied the governor obediently, and he went back and did just that.—Saturday Evening Post.

ELEVEN YEARS OF ECZEMA.

Hands Cracked and Bleeding—Nail Came Off of Finger—Cuticura Remedies Brought Prompt Relief.

"I had eczema on my hands for about eleven years. The hands cracked open in many places and bled. One of my fingers was so bad that the nail came off. I had often heard of cures by the Cuticura Remedies, but had no confidence in them as I had tried so many remedies, and they all had failed to cure me. I had seen three doctors, but got no relief. Finally my husband said that we would try the Cuticura Remedies, so we got a cake of Cuticura Soap, a box of Cuticura Ointment, and two bottles of Cuticura Resolvent Pills. Of course I kept Cuticura Soap all the time for my hands, but the cake of Soap and half a box of Cuticura Ointment cured them. It is surely a blessing for me to have my hands well, and I am very proud of having tried Cuticura Remedies, and recommend them to all suffering with eczema. Mrs. Eliza A. Wiley, R. F. D. No. 2, Liscomb, Iowa, Oct. 18, 1906."

Monarchs as Linguists.

Monarchs must know more than one language. King Edward, who traveled so much, speaks French better than some Frenchmen, and also German. The czar of Russia speaks French as well as his native tongue and knows the numerous dialects. Emperor William of Germany speaks French and English correctly, and is also well versed in Latin. The king of Spain, the youngest of all, speaks German with ease and also French and English. Because of his marriage he now practices the latter. The king of Portugal speaks French, English, German and Spanish. The king of Italy is a master of French and German and is also well versed in the various Italian dialects.

Horses Still in Demand.

Happily the horse has a faculty for upsetting the gloomy predictions that he is fated to be put out of business by the automobile. The horse business has kept right on developing in spite of the fact that the automobile industry has been engaged in similar undertaking. The demand for horses is still great. The supply of some classes of them is inadequate. The prices are high. The automobile may scare the horse into the ditch, but it isn't likely to crowd him to the wall. There will always be a field for the horse, as there will always be a field for the automobile.—Hartford Times.

Art in Hand-Made Articles.

Oscar S. Straus, the new secretary of commerce and labor, is a connoisseur of pottery and porcelains. "Machinery," he said, "has robbed us of our useful arts to a great extent. In machine-made things there can be no artistic quality, no individual expression. In hand-made things, even the humblest, there is always an opportunity for art to show itself."

Those things on which philosophy has set its seal are beyond the reach of injury; no age will discard them or lessen their force, each succeeding century will add somewhat to the respect in which they are held; for we look upon what is near us with jealous eyes, but we admire what is farther off with less prejudice.—Seneca.

Keep Your Blood Pure.

No one can be happy, light-hearted and healthy with a body full of blood that cannot do its duty to every part because of its impurity; therefore, the first and most important work in hand is to purify the blood so that every organ will get the full benefit of a healthy circulation. There is no remedy so good as that old family remedy, Brandreth's Pills. Each pill contains one grain of the solid extract of sarsaparilla blended with two grains of a combination of pure and mild vegetable products, making it a blood purifier unexcelled in character. One or two taken every night for awhile will produce surprising results.

Brandreth's Pills have been in use for over a century, and are for sale everywhere, plain or sugar-coated.

Father's Good Advice.

A young man from Pittsburg went to New York to "make good" in his chosen profession, says a New York letter. The other night he stood in the lobby of a hotel and a friend asked him what he thought of New York. "I have only been here two days," he replied, "so I have not seen the city very thoroughly. My father's parting words to me when I left home were: 'My son, you are going to a great city. There is much good and much evil to be found in New York. Keep to the straight and narrow path as closely as possible, avoid Wall street and, above all, beware of the monkey house.'"

No Adwain in Wisdom.

Mark Twain tells how four years ago he was invited by the University of Missouri to go out there and receive the degree of LL. D. At the same time he visited Hannibal, his boyhood home. Just as he was about to leave, being accompanied to the station by a crowd of citizens, Tom Nash, a school-fellow, came up—white headed, but still a boy. He shook hands with his friend of many a year and nodding toward the crowd said: "People of this town are the same blamed fools they always were, ain't they, Sam?"

Water on a Battleship.

As many as 8,000 gallons of fresh water are used in a large battleship daily. About two-thirds of this is taken up by the boilers, and the remainder is used for drinking, washing, cooking, etc. When the store which she has taken out with her from port has been used up, a vessel has to depend upon her condensers for further supplies. Every modern warship is fitted with evaporating machinery to distill the salt sea-water.

Somewhat Embarrassing Gift.

Dr. W. G. Grace, the famous English cricketer, has been the recipient of many gifts from lovers of cricket as tangible proofs of their admiration of his prowess. Chinese Superior to Japs.

Discussing the little rumple with Japan, Senator William A. Clark expresses the opinion the Chinese in this country are superior to the Japanese. "I have loaned thousands of dollars to Chinamen," said the senator, "and never have I known one to fail to meet his obligations." He emphasized his opinion as to the superiority of the Chinamen by calling attention to the fact that the Japanese in their banking institutions employ Chinamen in positions of trust in preference to their own countrymen.
